WELCOME TO WKND

MATT JUUL, BOSTON FEATURES EDITOR

Boston begins its transformation into a winter wonderland with a slew of events and tree lighting ceremonies on the Common, as well as other parts of the city. Now that the holiday season is in full swing, join in on the fun by stopping by a few of these celebrations. If you're more of a snow sports fan, you're also in luck, as ski season has finally returned to New England. Whether it's hitting the slopes or the skating rink, let us help you plan out your perfect winter weekend.

Annual tree lighting brightens up Boston Common

This year's ceremony marks a special anniversary.

CHARLIE WOLFSON

The Boston Common Tree Lighting ceremony returns for its 76th year this week.

The annual festivities kick off at 6 p.m. on Nov. 30 with a special show featuring musical acts and more. Channel 5 will air a live broadcast of the ceremony Thursday night.

Though it's the 76th tree lighting, this year's festivities will mark the centennial of a disaster that still links Boston and Nova Scotia. In 1917, when two ships collided in Halifax Harbor causing an explosion that killed nearly 2,000 people and injured close to 9,000, Boston quickly dispatched medical personnel and much-needed supplies to Nova Scotia.

Each year, a Nova Scotian tree is sent south of the border as a show of gratitude and unity in the aftermath of the 1917 catastrophe. This year's tree will come from Bob and Marion Campbell, a couple from Inverness County, Nova Scotia, Canadian officials said in a release.

"We will never forget the support the people of Boston and the surrounding area provided," Nova Scotia Premier Stephen McNeil said in the release. "As a thank you, and to mark our ongoing friendship, we are very pleased once again to give the gift of a beautiful Nova Scotia Christmas tree and celebrate the season in your city."

McNeil and Mayor Marty Walsh will preside over the festivities, which are being organized by the Boston Parks and Recreation Department. An array of holiday lights throughout the Common will illuminate in sequence shortly before 8 p.m., when Walsh and McNeil will take the stage alongside members of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police for the lighting of the 53-foot white spruce.

WCVB's Anthony Everett and Shayna Seymour will host Channel 5's live broadcast, in which those in attendance and television viewers will get to see live acts by Nova Scotian group Port Cities, Kara Dioguardi, the cast of "Elf: The Musical," Ellis C. Dawson III from the cast of "Aladdin," the Boston Pops Gospel Choir, plus headliner All 4 One.

Q: How do you know when nurse staffing at Tufts Medical Center's is inadequate?

A: When Tufts — on a nearly daily basis — sends out last minute, blast texts asking nurses to fill open shifts and holes in the schedule. That's how.

These are actual texts, modified to protect contact information only.

The registered nurses at Tufts Medical Center know all too well when a hospital's nurse staffing is chronically inadequate. Coping with bare-bones staffing has become a way of life for them, and there is no sign that things will improve any time soon. This practice is wrong, and this practice is dangerous.

Bad for Patients

From shift to shift, no one ever really knows if there will be enough nurses to provide patients with the care they deserve. And when those blast-texted shifts aren't filled, the remaining RNs are forced to care for too many patients at once. This is a dangerous practice that is well documented.

Bad for Nurses

When blast texts about open shifts flood RNs' cell phones, two things happen: 1) those who ARE NOT scheduled to work feel pressured to take extra shifts in the name of patient safety, and 2) those who ARE scheduled to work head to the hospital fearful of what the day has in store. Both situations are stressful and exhausting for nurses.

Bad for Budgets

This approach to staffing can also sink budgets, with hundreds of thousands of dollars unnecessarily spent on overtime and incentive pay — money that could instead be spent on adding new nursing positions.

It's time to end the blast texts and for Tufts management to safely staff the hospital during each and every shift.

10 Things you have to do in

Ring in the new year at First Night, relive the Boston Tea Party and more. MATT JUUL

While it's a pain for drivers looking for parking spots, winter is one of the best times for adventurous locals looking to explore the city. From holiday shows to end-of-the-year parties, here are 10 things you have to do in Boston this season.

1 Mayor's Holiday Special
The Mayor's Holiday Special returns for its 14th year this winter, offering serious discounts on some of the city's top shows and events. Through New Year's Eve, fans can score deals on a variety of programs, including the Boston Pops Holiday Pops, the José Mateo Ballet Theatre's production of "The Nutcracker," the Blue Man Group and more. Through Dec. 31, various locations, mayorsholiday.com

2 Miracle pop-ups
Miracle, a Christmas concept originally based in New York, is shipping up to the Boston area this winter. Head to Cambridge's Kimpton Marlowe, Bar Pina in Winston-Salem or The Citizen in Worcester through Christmas Eve to sip on seasonally-themed cocktails. Through Dec. 24, various locations

3 Get your brick on at Legoland
The Holiday Bricktacular returns to Legoland this December with build challenges, scavenger hunts and more. Each weekend, the discovery center will host holiday activities based on seasonally appropriate themes such as "Elf," "The Nutcracker" and "Rudolph the Red Nosed-Reindeer." Dec. 2-25, 598 Assembly Row, Somerville, $18.50+, boston.legolanddiscoverycenter.com

Scott Hamilton to host figure skating events in Boston

The Olympian is back in town for Sk8 to Elimin8 Cancer.

ZIPPORAH OSEI

The Skating Club of Boston is teaming up with Olympian Scott Hamilton's Cares Foundation to bring a spirit of charity to a favorite seasonal pastime with Sk8 to Elimin8 Cancer.

The event, which takes place Dec. 1 at the club's Brighton facility, features some of Boston's top skating talent, ice games and a Lap-a-thon, where you can race against professional skaters. All proceeds from the event will go toward supporting cancer research and education.

Hamilton is no stranger to Boston. As a child, he was treated at Boston Children's Hospital and spent time in the area whenever he visited his grandparents in Weymouth.

In addition to The Skating Club event, Hamilton will serve as a host at the free Tree Lighting Skating Spectacular at the Frog Pond on Nov. 30, where everyone is invited to see some of the best world's best skaters.

Scott Hamilton. ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

We spoke with the Olympic gold medalist and three-time cancer survivor about the event and whether we'll get another look at his ice skating skills any time soon.

Why did you start your foundation?

I survived cancer 20 years ago and I realized how many gaps and how many holes there are in the patient experience for surviving cancer. As part of a new identity in cancer activism, I decided that Cares was really going to be about being in alliance, really lining up with other people to link arts and to share resources and best practices. We want to elevate research scientists to give them what they need in order to be successful.

What advice would you give to cancer patients?

For survivors, it's an extraordinary feeling to know that you are now much stronger, much more resilient and much more powerful than you ever thought you could be in your life. Anyone who's been diagnosed with cancer while they are on this planet is a cancer survivor. It's an amazing thing to see that group of people come together in order to make it better for the next person facing that diagnosis.

What was it like working with The Skating Club?
It seems like Boston has become the center of the universe for U.S. figure skating. They held a very successful U.S. National Figure Skating Championship and they recently held a World Championship that was very well-attended, extremely well-organized. We were hoping that if we come to Boston, it would be exactly what happened during the World Championship. That is as good as it gets.

Will fans get a chance to see your moves?
That ship has pretty much sailed. I'm not the same physical person I was back then. My brain still remembers it but every cell in my body has been replaced since I skated. The rest of my body except my brain is just saying, "No, no, no. Not going to happen, dude. Sorry. Not going to happen." I don't want to write checks my body can't cash. I know that I love getting out onto the ice and skating around and just enjoying that but gravity is a cruel thing and I'm not going to defy it again.

Any other fun plans for when you're in town?
Just going back to Mass General, Children's Hospital, Dana-Farber and Brigham and Women's will bring back a lot of really powerful memories. I have so many great memories of Christmases in Weymouth, going to Marblehead and all those places where my family has lived, and it'd be great to get up there and just relive all that.

It's officially ski season in New England

Finally. ERIC WILBUR

ISTOCK

Maybe it's the first sight of local ski areas testing out their snow guns, or perhaps it's a stroll at the Boston Ski Expo that does the trick. But for the 34,000 who descended upon Killington Mountain Resort last weekend, the confirmation that it is ski season came in a spectacular show that validated our collective love for winter.

Local favorite Mikaela Shiffrin dominated during the World Cup's stop in Vermont, cementing ski racing's return to the East Coast as a rousing success. The 22-year-old Colorado native, who attended Vermont's Burke Mountain Academy, already has last year's overall title under her belt and will easily become a household name when she competes in the 2018 Winter Olympics.

Her win in the slalom generated a certain fever in the stands, an excitement level that handily translated from athlete to fans. In only two years, the World Cup has indeed become the northeast's signature ski event over Thanksgiving weekend.

However, it was only one major happening that signals the arrival of the most wonderful time of the year. On Sunday, 250 skiing and riding Santas will populate Sunday River for the Maine resort's annual fundraiser. Next weekend, a music festival will take over Stratton Mountain Resort, and it's downright impossible not to get excited about the season with all the recent, snowy social media posts by Jay Peak Resort.

Whatever might trigger the cheerful dawn that it's time to visit the slopes, it is an energy that is quickly becoming contagious.

'Man v. Food' host tackles Boston's food challenges

Casey Webb eats a 4.5-pound Irish breakfast and more in the series' new season.

MATT JUUL

"Man v. Food" host Casey Webb is shipping up to Boston for the new season of his hit Travel Channel show.

Season two of the recently revived series kicks off on Dec. 4, featuring stops at a trio of local restaurants, including Flann O'Brien's Pub. The Irish bar and eatery is a favorite among Mission Hill residents, in part for its mammoth food challenge.

Casey Webb. TRAVEL CHANNEL

Webb feasted on a 4.5-pound Irish breakfast while filming "Man v. Food" in Boston earlier this year, a challenge he calls "intense," but delicious. The meal consisted of bangers (sausage), rashers (bacon), blood pudding, eggs, potatoes and pancakes.

"It's not a traditional Irish breakfast," Webb says. "These guys put it over the top with the pancakes. That was something to be seen."

The Travel Channel star tells Metro that he had a blast filming at Flann O'Brien's because Irish pubs hold a special place in his heart.

"That was one of my favorite places that we visited because, being in New York and working in restaurants as long as I have, the Irish pub is one of my favorite places," Webb says. "That's exactly what that place is, a local Irish pub and they're just pumping out really great, traditional Irish food."

In addition to taking in the city's Irish pub scene, Webb also stopped at the legendary Durgin-Park in Faneuil Hall for 2.5-pound plate of prime rib, as well as the Boston Burger Company location near Fenway Park. Webb enjoyed a Thanksgiving-themed burger during his stop at the popular Massachusetts chain.

"Traditionally, turkey burgers have been known to be dried out, not moist and blasé. Not there," Webb says. "They build this burger called the Pilgrim, and it's cranberry, mayo, stuffing, turkey burger [with] a toasted bun. It's everything between two buns that you would want for Thanksgiving."

YOUR WEEKEND STARTS NOW

MOVIES

"Bill Nye: Science Guy"

Bill Nye combined an engineering degree with improv comedy chops as host of the beloved '90s kids' educational program "Bill Nye the Science Guy." Given his prior humorous, geeked-out public demeanor, many were surprised at his recent re-emergence as a rather serious defender of climate science, evolution, GMOs and more. This new film charts his pilgrim's progress.
Dec. 1-7, Brattle Theatre, 40 Brattle St., Cambridge, $9-$11, brattlefilm.org

MOVIES

'Three Billboards Outside Ebbing, Missouri'

Irish playwright-turned-auteur Martin McDonagh wrote and directed this dark dramedy, starring Frances McDormand as Mildred Hayes, a woman angry over what she considers the indifference of local law enforcement toward violent murder of her daughter. She puts up the titular advertisements to make her point publicly. Many people in town consider her crazy or wrong-headed. She holds her ground extremely firmly.
Now playing, Kendall Square Cinema, 355 Binney St., Cambridge, $13, landmarktheatres.com/boston

HOLIDAY FUN

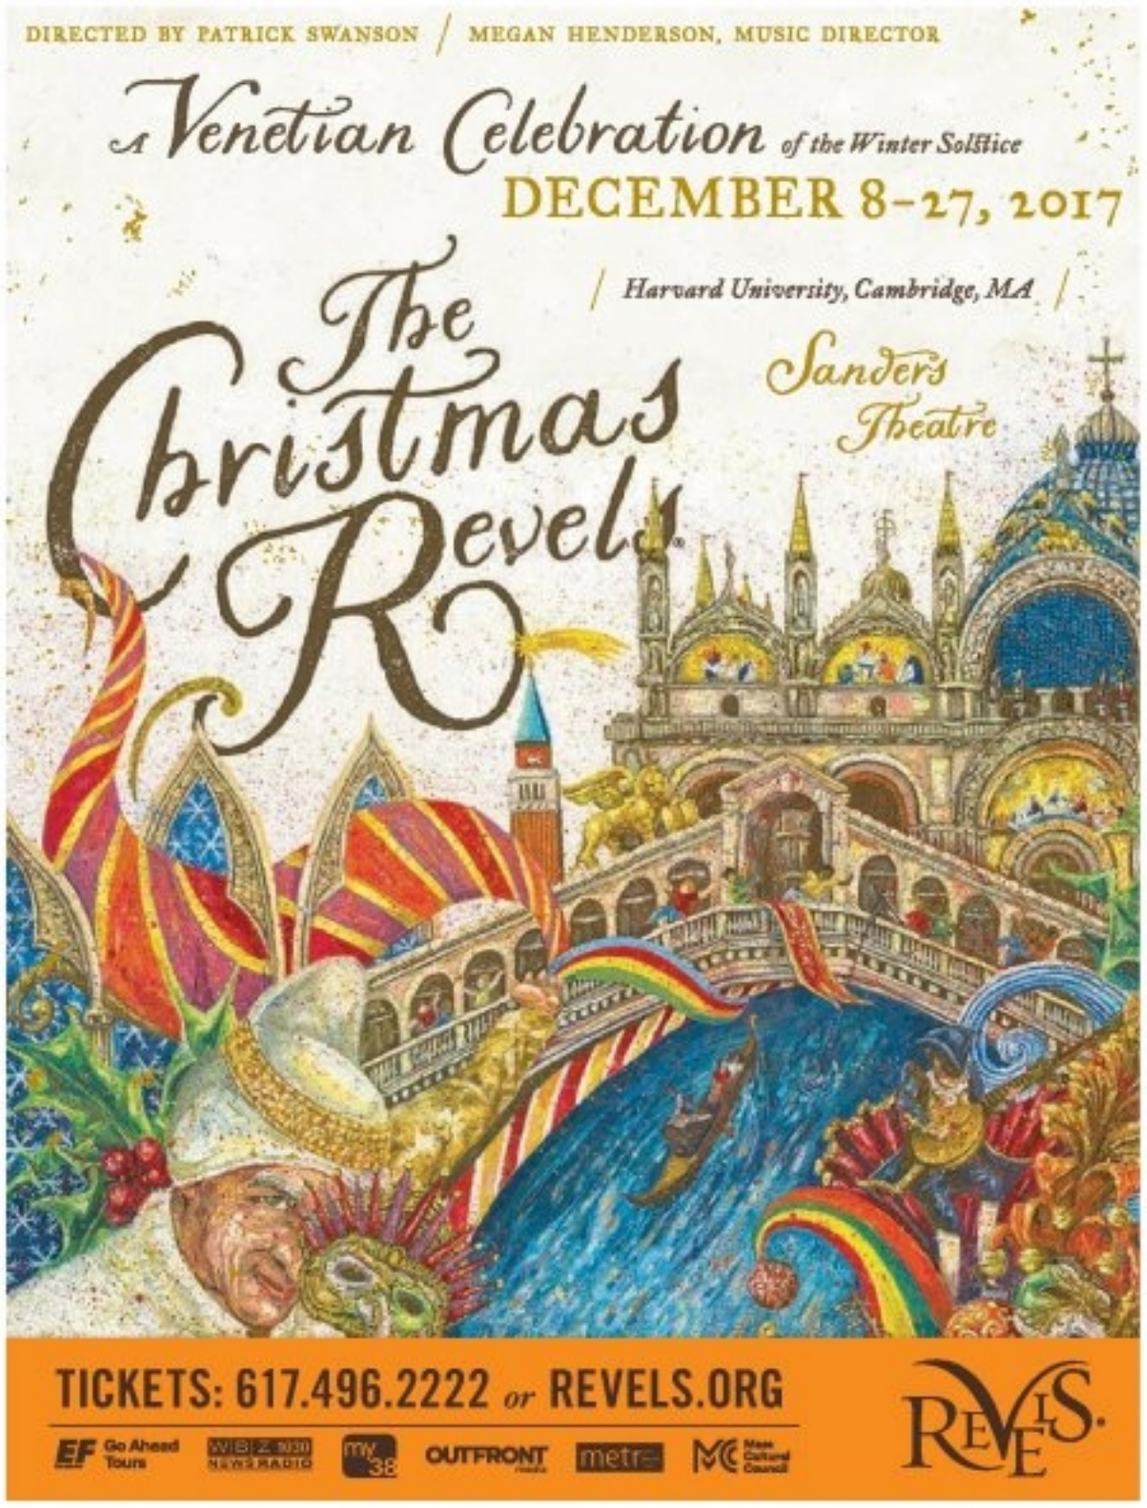
SoWa Winter Festival

Over 100 artisans of many different sorts will be selling their handmade wares at the SoWa Winter Festival, another of many opportunities to find a gift you can't find anywhere else—or just get yourself a treat for tolerating all this stress. Over on Thayer Street, you'll find a heated refreshment tent with hot chocolate, mulled wine, live music and more.
Dec. 2-3, SoWa Power Station, 540 Harrison Ave., No cover, sowaboston.com

GOING OUT

SantaCon

Pub crawls are nothing unusual in Boston, but when everyone involved is dressed like Santa, it tends to be more of an eye-catching event. SantaCon is also huge — last year, organizers claim it drew 3,000 people — ahem, Santas. Which means that a bar you may happen to be in may suddenly be invaded by Santas. Keep calm and carry on.
Dec. 2, various locations, free, santacon.info/Boston-MA



Brody Jenner

Brody, one of Caitlyn Jenner's non-Kardashian children, rarely appeared in the early days of "Keeping Up with the Kardashians," but that was partially because he was already a star on "The Hills." On Saturday, he'll be doing a full-on DJ set.
Dec. 2, 10 p.m., Royale, 279 Tremont St., $10-$25, 21+, royaleboston.com

Holiday Heroes Cornhole Tournament

Just because winter's upon us doesn't mean we have to stop playing cornhole. Get your finest team together or show up as a lone wolf and get paired with one, or just come to hang out. Event proceeds go to Youth Villages, helping kids in need. Admission includes one drink, certainly the minimum necessary for any serious cornhole action.
Dec. 3, 2 p.m., Lansdowne Pub, 9 Lansdowne St., $20-$75, youthvillages.org

Ugly Sweater Party at the Samuel Adams Brewery

Show off your finest ugly sweater at the Sam Adams Brewery on Friday, where you'll find not only seasonal beers but a mac 'n' cheese bar, ornament decorating, and what's described as "a ginormous chocolate fountain."
Dec. 1, 6-9 p.m., Samuel Adams Boston Brewery, 30 Germania St., samueladams.com

COMEDY

Jim Breuer

Jim Breuer will forever be associated with two roles: that of Brian in the 1998 cult stoner comedy "Half Baked" and one of the weirdest-ever "Saturday Night Live" characters, Goat Boy. But more recent years have found him hosting his own Sirius XM show, "Fridays With Jim Breuer," appearing as a priest, of all people, on the sitcom "Kevin Can Wait" and touring with his own rock band, The Loud & Rowdy.
Dec. 1, 7:30 p.m., Wilbur Theatre, 246 Tremont St., $35, thewilbur.com
MATTHEW DINARO

THEATER

"Black Nativity"

If something more spiritual is what you're looking for in a musical holiday fare, there's iconic Harlem Renaissance poet Langston Hughes' beloved version of the Christmas story, "Black Nativity," at once a distinctly African-American work and, in the words of its producers, "the black community's Christmas gift to the world." Boston boasts the longest-running annual production—this is year 47.

The ban will prevent plastic bags from ending up as litter throughout Boston, the City Council said. FLICKR / KATE TER HAAR

Boston City Council passes plastic-bag ban

The ordinance bans single-use sacks and imposes a 5-cent fee for other carriers in a move that councilors say will help the environment and residents. KRISTIN TOUSSAINT

Boston City Council unanimously voted Wednesday to approve a plastic-bag ban, following in the footsteps of neighbors like Brookline, Cambridge and Somerville and countless other towns and cities across the country.

The ordinance, led by Councilors Matt O'Malley and Michelle Wu, bans single-use plastic bags in the city and imposes a 5-cent fee on paper bags and thicker plastic bags. The ban still requires Mayor Marty Walsh's signature, and if signed by him, will go into effect within a year.

While some small-business owners and others in the industry have opposed the fee, O'Malley and the other councilors have said that action is needed to protect the environment and quality of life for Boston residents.

"I would argue that as it currently stands, we are paying a fee for plastic bags," O'Malley said during the City Council meeting ahead of the vote. "Businesses factor the cost of bags into their bottom line, and the Department of Public Works spends time cleaning up these bags from trees, parks, lots, storm drains and waterways."

In Boston, 20 tons of plastic bags are thrown into the city's single-stream recycling each month, O'Malley said, causing workers to spend hours each day removing bags from the equipment. "We are paying for that indirectly as taxpayers," he added.

"Plastic bags are only used for an average of 12 minutes, but their impact on the city's streets and drains is permanent."

Matt O'Malley

OUT OF THE 1 TRILLION SINGLE-USE PLASTIC BAGS THAT WILL BE USED THIS YEAR, 357 MILLION WILL BE IN BOSTON.

Around the world, 1 trillion single-use bags will be used this year, and in Boston alone, that number is 357 million plastic bags.

"Plastic bags are only used for an average of 12 minutes, but their impact on the city's streets and drains is permanent," O'Malley said. "They end up in streets, storm gutters, trees and tangled in our wildlife and marine ecosystem."

The fact that the ban will go into effect in a year if approved by the mayor provides time for sufficient outreach efforts throughout the city, the council said.

At-Large Councilor Ayanna Pressley added that with the passing of the ban, she will encourage the city to ease the possible burden such a ban would place on certain residents.

"I recognize and am sensitive to concerns expressed about possible impacts of this policy on our low-income community and seniors," she said. "It's important, however, to note that all too often our low-income, senior and communities of color are the same communities and populations that are burdened by toxic dumping grounds, rampant litter in their communities, food desserts and the threat of rising sea levels."

Pressley plans to push for the city to provide free reusable tote bags to residents throughout Boston. She called the ban "a step toward a greener, cleaner and more sustainable Boston."

Boston is prepared for harsh weather, Walsh says

"Our winters, as we know, in the city can be tough, but the people of Boston are even tougher." KRISTIN TOUSSAINT

The city has taken steps to prepare for the snow that may be arriving in the near future. NICOLAUS CZARNECKI, METRO

With hundreds of snow equipment and thousands of pounds of salt at the ready, Mayor Marty Walsh said that Boston is prepared for the upcoming winter.

"It's that time of year again," Walsh said Wednesday at a press conference at the Public Works Department. "Our winters, as we know, in the city can be tough, but the people of Boston are even tougher than the winters. We've lived through winters that seemed like they would never end, certainly in 2015."

Forecasters have alluded to an extra-snowy season, with the Farmer's Almanac predicting "snowier-than-normal" conditions in the Northeast this winter. The city is preparing for, and alerting residents on how to deal with, the worst.

Officials have stockpiled 44,000 tons of salt in neighborhoods across the city, "ready to be deployed in advance of a storm," said Chris Osgood, the city's chief of streets.

The city will typically be using rock salt, Osgood said, but will brine certain key locations with a salt solution in advance of any blizzards.

The city also has 200 pieces of snow and ice equipment waiting in the wings, from large snow plows to machines that spread salt. There are also 500 contracted plowers that the city can call in for more severe instances.

This year, officials said, the city is focused on installing a new GPS fleet tracking system that will help support the hundreds of plowers clearing the streets in the midst of a storm.

"So as people call us to tell us their streets haven't been plowed, we'll be able to see what the situation is and why they haven't been plowed," Walsh said.

In the event of school closures, officials will try to alert families of cancellation the day before, so parents can make arrangements for their children's care.

"Last year, we had five snow days. I know the young people of our city are hoping for a lot more than five; we're hoping for a lot fewer than five," Walsh said. In the event of closures, Boston Centers for Youth & Families will be open to children age 7 and older.

The truth behind what people are calling the Great Christmas Tree Shortage

The National Christmas Tree Association reports this could raise prices by 10 to 15 percent in some locations. SAM BRODSKY

Christmas trees may cost more this holiday season because of reasons related to the Great Recession. GETTY IMAGES

They're calling it "The Great Christmas Tree Shortage of 2017." It sounds scary, but truth be told, it may or may not affect you this year.

According to the National Christmas Tree Association (NCTA), 25 million to 30 million of these holiday staples are sold in the U.S. annually. However, the national Christmas tree shortage may lead to a rise in prices between 10 and 15 percent. It is reportedly linked to the Great Recession nearly a decade ago, which caused farmers to limit their crops to save money.

NCTA spokesperson Doug Hundley told News12 that "in those years, we were in a recession and tree sales were down, prices were down, and we weren't planting as many trees." Given that they take about 10 years to grow to their Christmas-ready state of 7 to 8 feet, we're only now getting hit with the aftermath of smaller supply.

For people who may face this rise in retail prices, Hundley assures Metro that the difference is miniscule. "It's like a $40 tree going up to a $45 tree," he says. In any case, he encourages the public to purchase their trees earlier in the season for the best selections — but most of you already knew that.

Here's how people reacted to the news about 'Today' host Matt Lauer

Plenty of people weighed in on the news of the NBC personality's firing after a sexual-misconduct complaint, from fellow journalists to the president. KRISTIN TOUSSAINT

On Wednesday morning, NBC announced that Matt Lauer, host of the "Today" show, had been fired after the network received a complaint about inappropriate sexual behavior.

While some people reacted to the news of his behavior with surprise, others alluded that this wasn't out of left field.

Comedian Kathy Griffin said on Twitter that "Matt Lauer has been on my list for a while. It's really too bad more Americans don't come to my shows. I pretty much recite the list in every show. Haha. I told you, my memory is long, my friends. I've been around a long time…"

Matt Lauer was fired from his role at NBC after a complaint about his "inappropriate sexual behavior in the workplace." SCREENSHOT / YOUTUBE

Megyn Kelly, who joined NBC's "Today" earlier this year, addressed the news during her hour of the morning show.

In speaking about Lauer, Kelly quickly focused on his alleged victims.

"When this happens, what we don't see is the pain on the faces of those who found the courage to come forward, and it is a terrifying thing to do," she said.

President Donald Trump weighed in on the news, tweeting, "Wow, Matt Lauer was just fired from NBC for 'inappropriate sexual behavior in the workplace.' But when will the top executives at NBC & Comcast be fired for putting out so much Fake News. Check out Andy Lack's past!"

That tweet spurred its own responses, with people pointing to allegations in Trump's own past and his support of embattled Senate candidate Roy Moore.

No kids allowed

Goodbye, responsibility. Hello, adults-only vacation at these sophisticated resorts.

Fodor's Travel

Magee Homestead

Adventurers and explorers will relish the wide-open expanse at Magee Homestead in Saratoga, Wyoming. There's so much to do here, from shooting and archery to horseback riding and an aerial ropes course. Of course, there's nothing wrong with simply relaxing poolside after a spa treatment. The spa uses herbs grown in the ranch's new greenhouse (the largest in Wyoming) in herbal compresses, and much of the produce is used in the kitchen. The ranch even has its own herd of Akaushi Japanese Wagyu cattle, and the burgers and steak are truly some of the best in the country. With just nine cabins, you'll often feel like you have the whole place to yourself.

The Point

The 11 cabins that make up The Point on Saranac Lake, New York, were formerly William Avery Rockefeller's summer home back in the Gilded Age. Here, everything from menus to activities is entirely customized, so you can simply wake up and do whatever you feel like doing. They'll set up lunch for you in the woods if you'd like to go hiking, or take one of the Budsin Wood Craft lightning bug boats out for a picnic cruise. Dinner is served at 8 p.m., bringing everyone together for a four-course feast after a casual cocktail hour, but you can always dine in the privacy of your room too. There's no WiFi, so go forest bathing or work on an impossible jigsaw puzzle by the fireplace.

Hotel Wailea

Wailea is perhaps the most popular beach in Maui, but Hotel Wailea is the only adults-only option around, ideal for intimate romance away from the larger, more crowded beachfront properties. Hawaii's only Relais & Chateaux property offers 72 one-bedroom suites, all with private ocean-facing lanais. Guests can take complimentary aerial yoga classes, go canoeing, or learn to kiteboard–the hotel has its own kiteboarding academy.

INSIDER TIP: From December through April, you'll likely spot whales during a sunset sail.

Cal-a-Vie

Come to Cal-a-Vie for a generous dose of Southern Californian healthy living. This health spa doesn't feel restrictive but rather nourishes the body, spirit, and mind with nutritious food, breathtaking hikes, and fun exercise options from cardio kickboxing to Zumba and water volleyball. Sign up for a three-night, four-night, or weeklong program to recharge your batteries and take care of yourself. Spa treatments are included with all packages, so soothe sore muscles and relax after a vigorous workout.

Monastero Santa Rosa is an intimate getaway with just 20 rooms. PROVIDED

Villa Buena Onda

It's hard to believe the tranquility at Villa Buena Onda, just 20 minutes from Liberia International Airport in Costa Rica. The two-tier pool, spa, and ocean-facing yoga deck are just a few of the relaxing amenities, and toiletries in the eight rooms are made locally by Raw Botanicals. You're close enough to walk into Playas del Coco, a charming and tourist-friendly fishing village, although it's tempting to spend all day at the members-only beach club. Costa Rica is famous for its array of flora and fauna, and you'll spot lush plants, monkeys and birds while strolling the property's tropical dry forest grounds.

Rancho Pescadero

Todos Santos is known as Mexico's artist enclave, the Tulum to Cabo's Cancun. Rancho Pescadero embraces the ethos of relaxed luxury on 15 acres of private beach beneath the Sierra Laguna mountains. There's surfing, fishing, and the opportunity to swim with whale sharks in the summer. Culinary connoisseurs can enjoy mixology classes or stroll through the garden with chef César Pita before preparing lunch with the best Baja ingredients. The resort often hosts guest chefs for special weekends and there are arts, music and film festivals in Todos Santos throughout the year.

Monastero Santa Rosa

At Monastero Santa Rosa on the Amalfi Coast of Italy, a cliffside 17th-century convent has been turned into a secluded 20-room luxury resort overlooking the Bay of Salerno. The full-service spa is impressive for such a small property, and canopied daybeds entice guests to curl up with a lover or a good book. Terraced organic gardens provide herbs and vegetables for the on-site Ristorante il Refettorio.

Spicers Sangoma Retreat

"Sangoma" is the Zulu word for healer, and this eco-certified retreat with just eight suites is the kind of place that will heal your soul. Bathtubs at Spicers Sangoma Retreat have sunset bush views, as does the infinity lap pool. Go on a night time nature walk to spot wildlife in the foothills of Australia's Blue Mountains. Leave the blinds open and wake up to the golden sunrise before a refreshing rinse in the outdoor shower. Lazily falling back to sleep in the plush oversized king bed is perfectly acceptable, too.

Get cozy on Saranac Lake at The Point. PROVIDED

3 Things to watch for as Patriots face Bills

1 Brady stopper?

New Bills head coach Sean McDermott is a part of the Andy Reid coaching tree and has had decent success against Tom Brady and the Patriots over the years. When McDermott was the defensive coordinator of the Carolina Panthers in 2013, he got the best of Brady in a memorable 24-20 Panthers win at Carolina on "Monday Night Football." McDermott helped limit Brady to 296 yards passing, one touchdown and a 91.3 passer rating. Brady also threw a pick in the loss. Going way back to the 2004 Super Bowl against the Eagles, McDermott again had decent success against Brady. The Eagles lost, but only gave up 24 points to the Pats. It was the one Super Bowl win for the Patriots where Brady did not win game MVP (Deion Branch).

2 Yards, not points

This will be a battle of "bend but don't break" defenses as both teams tend to give up a ton of yardage but tighten up in the red zone. The Bills give up 354.9 points per game (25th in NFL) but only allow 23.6 points per game (17th in NFL). The Patriots allow a whopping 385.5 points per game (30th in NFL) but give up just 20.0 points per game (11th in NFL). The good news for the Pats is that their defense is going in the right direction and the jury is still out on Buffalo. Before holding the Chiefs to 10 points last week they gave up 54 points to the Chargers and 47 points to New Orleans.

3 Throwing shade

For all the good the Patriots defense has done these past two months, a top-level running back has shown the ability to torch them. The Chargers' Melvin Gordon rushed for 132 yards on 14 carries and a touchdown against the Pats last month. The Pats will face another top 10 running back this Sunday in Buffalo's LeSean McCoy – who is eighth overall in total rushing yards this season in the NFL. McCoy had two plus-80 yard rushing days against the Pats in his first season in Buffalo two seasons ago and last year he ran for 70 yards and caught six balls for 38 yards and a touchdown in his only game against the Pats (a 16-0 Bills win at Gillette).

A Pats fan's perspective

DANNY PICARD
OPINION
Listen to "The Danny Picard Show" at dannypicard.com. Follow him on Twitter @dannypicard

Unfortunately, here in Boston, we'll always be linked to the Manning family. So the idea that we'd have some thoughts on the latest Eli Manning saga is the furthest thing from preposterous.

The New York Giants quarterback was benched on Tuesday. He will not be the starter this Sunday against the Raiders in Oakland.

Let me clarify something to those who get their news strictly on social media: Manning did not get murdered. He just got benched.

Based on some of the "shocked" reactions I witnessed on Tuesday, from both media and fans, you'd think there is a funeral later this week.

I responded, of course, with some harsh, yet factual, criticism.

The Giants are 2-9. They're one of just three teams that have been officially eliminated from playoff contention, along with the 1-10 San Francisco 49ers — whose only win this year has come against the Giants — and the 0-11 Cleveland Browns.

It marks the fifth time in the last six years that the Giants have missed out on the NFL playoffs. And right now, the organization's goal should be to lock up a top-three pick in the 2018 draft.

If Manning is as good as he gets credit for, then his presence under center the last five games of the season would certainly hurt his team's chances of obtaining that top-three draft pick.

I'm not telling you Manning's career is over. I'm not even saying his time with the Giants is done. But to think, there were people on Twitter who saw my criticism and accused me of "dancing on the guy's grave."

Again, "grave" was their word, certainly not mine.

The outcry has to do with "respect," and how coach Ben McAdoo is showing none of it by benching Manning for Geno Smith.

First off, I have enough respect for Manning to know that when a decision does get made to bench a quarterback of his stature, it's agreed upon by people much more important than the coach. What, you think football operations and ownership had no say in the matter? You think McAdoo woke up on Tuesday morning, thought about benching the franchise quarterback who has two Super Bowl rings, drove to MetLife Stadium, and made the decision on his own? Sounds good.

Talk about respect all you want, but the bottom line is, if you're an NFL quarterback and you don't want to get benched, then don't get eliminated from playoff contention after Week 12. Seems pretty simple to understand.

And don't give me the, "How would you feel if Tom Brady got benched during a 2-9 season?" That would literally never happen, because Brady would never find himself with a 2-9 record.

Middle East coverage you won't find anywhere else.

Do you know how difficult it is to be 2-9 right now in the NFL?

And that's really all this is about. Even if the Giants were just 5-6, Manning would still be their starting quarterback, because they'd still be alive in the playoff race.

Manning has a full no-trade clause and is currently in the second year of a four-year, $84 million contract extension that included a $31 million signing bonus and $65 million guaranteed.

Being benched right now might not sit well with Manning, who had started 210 consecutive games to this point, but that doesn't mean he can't be the Giants' starting quarterback for Week 1 of the 2018 season. And if it's not with the Giants, I guarantee he'll be starting somewhere next year.

So I'm not dancing on anybody's grave here. Because there is no grave. There's just a banged-up organization that has nothing left to play for this season, other than a top-three draft pick.

Say what you will, I actually have a ton of respect for Manning and the career he's had thus far. But I also have common sense, which, in this specific case, calls for no sympathy.

Where will Eli play next?

Speculation has already begun as to where Eli Manning will continue his pro football career and there are two obvious landing spots for the two-time Super Bowl winner. First is Jacksonville (Manning's old coach Tom Coughlin is in charge) and second is Denver (John Elway already won a title with a Manning playing his final years in a Broncos uniform).

Aries You are in the zone and prepared to take on any task you face. Speed up and take matters into your own hands. Become the powerhouse required to meet demands.

Taurus Treat superiors with respect, and have patience when dealing with bureaucracy. Explosive situations will only turn in your favor if they are controlled properly.

Gemini Refuse to let anger take charge if you don't like what someone does or says. Keep the peace, but offer wisdom and solutions that will make a difference.

Cancer Don't bend to whatever whim moves a certain someone. Say no and spare yourself the stress of having to wiggle your way out of something you don't want to do.

Leo Refuse to let emotions or pride stand in your way. If you accept the inevitable, you will be able to turn it into a positive with a little ingenuity.

Virgo Get into the mood when it comes to networking events or educational pursuits. How you present who you are and what you have to offer will determine your success.

Libra Positive change is highlighted. Don't be afraid to follow your gut feeling and do what's best for you. A business trip, meeting or educational pursuit is favored.

Scorpio Dealing with institutions and government agencies will be taxing but worth your while if you can take advantage of a loophole, rebate or settlement.

Sagittarius A positive change to your current living arrangements will encourage you to spend more time with someone special. Channel your energy into what makes you happy.

Capricorn Don't get flustered if you are dealing with a superior, institution or government agent. Stay focused on what you can get done, not on what stands in your way.

Aquarius Favors can be called in, and doing something that you've always wanted to do will now be an option. Don't procrastinate when you should make a positive change.

Pisces Concentrate on changes going on at work or with you personally. Knowing what you are up against will encourage you to accept what's happening. EUGENIA LAST
